PREFACE

The Inventory of Federal Archives in the States is one of the products of the work of the Survey of Federal Archives, which operated as a nation-wide project of the Works Progress Administration from January 1, 1936 to June 30, 1937, and has been continued in Louisiana since that date as a state project with Louisiana State University as its local sponsor.

The plan for the organization of the Inventory is as follows: Series I consists of reports on the administration of the Survey, acknowledgments, and general discussions of the location, condition, and content of federal archives in the states. Succeeding series contain the detailed information secured by workers of the Survey, in inventory form, a separate series number being assigned to each of the executive departments (except the Department of State) and other major units of the Federal Government. Within each series No. 1 is a general introduction to the field organization and records of the governmental agency concerned; the succeeding numbers contain the inventory proper, separate numbers being assigned to each state in alphabetical order. Thus, in each series, the inventory for Alabama is No. 2, that for Arizona No 3, that for Arkansas No. 4, etc.

For each local office information regarding each series, or unit of related records, is presented in the following order: title, inclusive dates ("to date" indicating an open file at the time the information was secured), general description of informational content, description of the system of filing or indexing (if any), a statement of frequency and purpose of use, form of the record itself (bound volumes, sheets in folders, etc.), linear footage, description of the containers, physical condition of the records (not stated if satisfactory), location by room number or other identifying information, and finally, the number of the Form 58SA on which this information was originally recorded by a Survey worker and from which it was abstracted for the Inventory. This form is on file in The National Archives. When it contains substantial information on addenda sheets which has not been included in the mimeographed abstract, indication of this is given by use of the reference "See addenda."

In Louisiana the work of the Survey has been under the direction of Mr. Stanley C. Arthur since its inception. This Inventory of the records of the Federal Courts in Louisiana was prepared in the New Orleans office of the Survey under the direction of Mrs. Norris Fazekas, editor-in-chief and assistant state supervisor, and was edited before final typing by Dr. Richard R. Stenberg of the Washington office.

INTRODUCTION

Shortly after the United States purchased the Province of Louisiana from France, Congress divided the area into two territories and provided a government and judiciary for each. The territory west of the Mississippi, above 33° north latitude, was designated the Territory of Upper Louisiana; that below this line, west of the Mississippi River and including the Island of Orleans, was designated the Territory of Orleans. On April 12, 1812 the latter, including the territory below the 31° line south of the Territory of Mississippi and east to the Pearl River, was admitted to statehood as the State of Louisiana.

By the Act of March 26, 1804 judicial power was vested in a superior court presided over by three judges, and in inferior courts, all having general jurisdiction over the territory. Provision was made at the same time for a Federal judiciary for the Territory of Orleans, whose judge was to have the same jurisdiction and powers exercised by the Federal judge of the Kentucky district.

On December 11, 1804 President Madison appointed Dominick Augustine Hall as the first Federal judge for the Territory of Orleans, but the first case was not heard until July 28, 1806. The clerk of court was appointed by the judge, while the president appointed the United States attorney and the United States marshal for the district.

This first United States court sat in a small, one-story building in Royal Street, between Dumaine and St. Philip, and remained there until April 1823, the building being sold two years later by presidential proclamation. The completion of the Customhouse at Canal and Decatur Streets in 1823, allowed the court to sit there until 1847, at which time the building was demolished and construction work on a new Customhouse was begun. During this period the court occupied various rented quarters, in 1848, at 117 Royal Street; later in Royal Street between St. Louis and Toulouse, and in 1852 it was located at St. Charles and Hevia (now Lafayette) Streets, in the City Hall. In 1858, when this seat of city government was demolished to make way for a new and the present City Hall, the Federal Court was housed in the Old Merchant's Exchange, 20 (now 126) Royal Street, where it sat in the high-domed exchange room on the second floor. Here the United States District Court remained until the beginning of the War Between the States. On January 26, 1861, the court was adjourned sine die and immediately reopened as a Confederate States Court. On May 4, 1862 the court was reopened as a Provisional Military Court formed by Major-General Benj. F. Butler. On June 24, 1863 Judge Edward H. Durell was appointed judge of the United States District Court for Eastern Louisiana, and the court resumed its duties after a hiatus of two and a half years.

In 1866 the District Court was removed to quarters in the new Customhouse, located in the square bounded by Canal, North Peters, Decatur, and Customhouse (now Iberville) Streets, where it remained until 1915, when it was relocated in the present New Orleans Post Office Building, in Camp Street opposite Lafayette Square.

The territorial jurisdiction of the District Court has been changed several times. Its jurisdiction extended over the entire state under the title of "United States District Court of Louisiana", until May 1823, when the state was divided into Eastern and Western Districts. The court at New Orleans continued as court for the Eastern District until the two districts were consolidated in 1845. Cases pending in the Western District Court were then transferred to the Eastern District Court at New Orleans. In 1849 Eastern and Western Districts were again established, but in 1866 they were consolidated.

Eastern District

The present Eastern District was created by Act of March 3, 1881, and it was subdivided by Act of August 13, 1888, which required that the judge sit at Baton Rouge bi-annually, as well as at New Orleans. The presiding judge and his court officials traveled to Baton Rouge from New Orleans to hold court twice a year in the Old Parish Court-house.

The parishes of Assumption, Iberia, Jefferson, Lafourche, Orleans, Plaquemines, St. Bernard, St. Charles, St. James, St. John the Baptist, St. Mary, St. Tammany, Tangipahoa, Terrebonne, and Washington, comprise the present New Orleans Division. The parishes of Ascension, East Baton Rouge, West Baton Rouge, East Feliciana, West Feliciana, Iberville, Livingston, Pointe Coupee, and St. Helena, comprise the Baton Rouge Division.

In 1888 a deputy clerk was commissioned in Baton Rouge and a permanent office was set up in a then new post office building. The circuit and district courts met at the same time and the same judge, court officials, and jury served each. In general the district court tried civil cases. In some few cases the two courts had concurrent jurisdiction. In 1911 the circuit courts were abolished and since that year the district court tried all federal cases.

No permanent records were kept in Baton Rouge, all papers having to do with the cases being transferred to the clerk's office in New Orleans. In 1913, the records allowed to remain in the Baton Rouge division in charge of a deputy clerk were removed to new offices when a new post office building was erected. Several bankruptcy cases were lost, but no others are now missing. While most of the papers of this division have been filed in the New Orleans court record room, all of the old minute books and criminal and civil dockets are in Baton Rouge.

Western District

Under Act of Congress of May 3, 1823, when the United States Judicial District of Louisiana was divided into two districts, the District Court for the Western District was directed to sit at Opelousas, and had jurisdiction over the parishes of Attakapas, Opelousas, Rapides, Natchitoches, and Ouachita. Congress did not provide for an additional judge, but required that John Dick, judge in the Eastern District, also hold court at Opelousas, where a clerk, marshal, and district attorney were provided. During the life of this court new officers were appointed at almost every session and its docket was very light, the minute book showing that the marshal convened and adjourned the court upon the written orders of the judge, who did not attend.

This Western District Court continued in existence until February 13, 1845, when Congress directed that all pending civil and criminal matters of the court be transferred to the Eastern District Court for final disposition. These records are still in the custody of the clerk of the Eastern District. It was soon discovered, however, that no provision had been made for trial of the cases pending on the dockets of the Circuit Court of the Western District, and it was necessary to pass another act on February 20, 1845 to remedy this defect. It is evident that not all of its papers were preserved.

By Act of Congress of March 3, 1849 when Louisiana was again divided into two districts, the Western District was subdivided into four divisions, the court to hold annual terms at Opelousas, Alexandria, Shreveport, and Monroe.

On June 27, 1866 Congress again consolidated Louisiana into one judicial district. Although the act specifically provided for the deposit of all records with the clerk of the old Eastern District, they have not been located by the Survey of Federal Archives and there is nothing to indicate that this section of the act was ever carried out. The presumption is that they were lost or destroyed during the War Between the States or by the fire which destroyed the Courthouse at Opelousas in 1888.

The United States District Court for the Western District of Louisiana, as presently constituted, was created by a Congressional Act of March 3, 1881. This act provided that there should be held semi-annually in said district two stated sessions of the circuit and district courts at Opelousas, Alexandria, Shreveport, and Monroe. By Act of August 8, 1888 the Western District was divided into five divisions, namely: Shreveport, Alexandria, Opelousas, Lake Charles, and Monroe.

The Shreveport division embraces the parishes of Caddo, DeSoto, Bossier, Webster, Claiborne, Bienville, Natchitoches, Sabine, and Red River, and is the principal domicile of the court. Term of court is held in Shreveport on the third Monday of February and October. Efforts to locate the original site of the court have not been successful; it has been learned, however, that at some time during the period from 1881 to 1897 (when the first Federal Building was erected) the court occupied the Smith Building, 517-521 Spring Street. In 1897 the first Federal Building was completed on the Northeast corner of Texas and Marshall Streets, with courtroom and offices for the court. While rebuilding this structure in 1912 the court occupied the Atlas Building in the 600 block of Market Street, until the completion of the work. Remodeling again compelled it to move to the Slattery Building in July 1931, and the court did not return to the Federal Building until August 1932.

The Alexandria division comprises the parishes of Rapides, Avoyelles, Catahoula, Grant, LaSalle, and Winn. Term of court is held in Alexandria on the fourth Monday of January and June. The court sat in the Parish Courthouse until 1896. In that year the court was moved to the Post Office Building in Johnston Street, where it remained until 1934. The new U. S. Post Office and Courthouse was erected in 1934 in the 5th block of Murray Street, and the court was moved to this building. The only permanent records at Alexandria are the criminal minutes, judgments, dockets, and patent and land certificates of the court. All the other records are in the custody of the clerk of the District Court at Shreveport.

The Lake Charles division comprises the parishes of Calcasieu, Acadia, Cameron, Jefferson Davis, and Allen. The court is required to sit in this division the third Monday of May and December each year. The court has occupied its own quarters in the U. S. Post Office and Courthouse since its erection in 1910, and, although little is available on its earlier activities, it is likely that it also occupied space in the Calcasieu Parish Courthouse.

The Monroe division comprises the parishes of Ouachita, Franklin, Richland, Morehouse, East Carroll, West Carroll, Madison, Tensas, Concordia, Union, Caldwell, Jackson, and Lincoln. Term of court is held on the first Monday of April and October. As the Federal judge resides in Monroe, many of the court's records, usually filed with the district clerk, are kept there for his convenience. The probation officer is also located in this division.

The Opelousas division comprises the parishes of St. Landry, Evangeline, St. Martin, Lafayette, and Vermilion. The court sits in this division on the first Monday of January and June. Court was first held in Opelousas in 1882 in the old parish courthouse. This building burned in 1886, probably destroying some of the court records. The new parish courthouse housed the court until it occupied its present quarters in the U. S. Post Office and Courthouse in 1891. This building was remodeled in 1930. Although a deputy clerk is in office here, the majority of the files of the court are in the office of the clerk at Shreveport.

United States Circuit Court

Although Congress had made provisions for circuit courts at the time the district courts were created, in the Louisiana jurisdiction all federal matters were vested in the district court from its inception until November 19, 1838, when a docket, minute book, and other paraphernalia of the clerk of the circuit court were begun. The first session was held with District Judge P. K. Lawrence, presiding. John McKinley, Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court assigned to this circuit court district, did not appear. Absence of assigned supreme court justices continued through the history of the court until improvements in transportation facilities made it possible for them to attend and preside.

By Act of March 3, 1837 the Eastern District became known as the 9th Circuit and continued as such until August 16, 1842, when it was designated as the 5th, and on June 24, 1863 it was changed to the 6th Circuit.

The court's existence was interrupted during the War Between the States. The minute book contains under date of January 15, 1861, a printed excerpt from the articles of secession and a notation that the court had adjourned sine die. It was not reopened until June 24, 1863. On December 26, 1869, in order to relieve crowded dockets, a special circuit judge, William B. Woods, was appointed. However, he did not qualify and it was not until May 13, 1881 that Judge Don A. Pardee was commissioned.

During the late '40s the court sat in the Merchants Exchange Building, old No. 20 (now 126) Royal St., where the trials of General William Walker for filibustering were held. Later it was domiciled in the New Orleans City Hall where it sat until after the War Between the States. Its sessions were then held in the Customhouse from 1867 until its abolishment by an act of Congress in 1911.

Little information could be obtained regarding the establishment and function of the Circuit Court in the Western District. Although mention has been made as to the existence of the Circuit Court in the Western District when the said district was abolished by Act of February 13, 1845 the Survey of Federal Archives research reveals no records earlier than 1882.

The Circuit Court for the Western District of Louisiana was recreated by Act of March 3, 1881, which divided the jurisdiction of the former Circuit Court for Louisiana into two districts. By Act of August 8, 1888, which divided the Western District into divisions, the new court was domiciled at Shreveport and held regular semi-annual terms at Opelousas, Alexandria, Monroe, and Lake Charles. The circuit and district courts met at the same time, and the same judge, court officials, and jury served each. In some few cases the two courts had concurrent jurisdiction.

On March 3, 1911 United States Circuit Courts were abolished and since that time the District Court has tried all cases involving federal questions or in which its jurisdiction was successfully invoked. All records of the old Circuit Court are in the custody of the United States District Court, Eastern District of Louisiana.

United States Circuit Court of Appeals

By Act of Congress of March 3, 1891 the United States Circuit Courts of Appeals were established. These courts have appellate jurisdiction only and were established to relieve the congested condition of the docket of the United States Supreme Court. The Courts of Appeals were given exclusive appellate jurisdiction over certain classes of cases, in which their decisions are final. The records described below are those of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Fifth Circuit, which embraces the states of Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas. The records of all cases appealed in the states enumerated are kept in the files of the court at New Orleans in custody of the clerk. The Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit began functioning as such shortly after the passage of the Act of Congress of March 3, 1891, the first minute entry of the court bearing date of June 16, 1891. The court was first housed in the Customhouse, 423 Canal St., New Orleans, and it has occupied its present quarters in the U. S. Post Office Building, 600 Camp St., New Orleans, since 1915.

Confederate States Court

When the Louisiana articles of secession were signed, January 26, 1861, the following order was spread upon the minute books of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana:

"Louisiana, on this day, seceding from the United States, the court pronounced the following final order:

"Percuriam: It is ordered that the clerk and his deputies shall take all necessary measures to preserve the books and records of the court, and shall file therein all documents presented for the reservation of suitors' legal rights.

"And the court adjourned sine die."

The United States Court did not function again until the arrival of the Federal fleet and troops May 1, 1862. In order to take care of pending litigation and other matters which properly should come before a court, when Louisiana left the Union, the Confederate States of America organized a court of equivalent jurisdiction, which functioned from 1861 until February 1862. The first suits docketed being cases having to do with vessels of the enemy taken as prizes by Confederate navy vessels or those privately owned. Of interest among these Confederate court papers are those pertaining to the famous Myra Clark Gaines litigation. The last entry being Case No. 297, a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, which was still pending when the court was closed by the capture of New Orleans by the Federal fleet under Admiral David G. Farragut. During its existence the Confederate court heard a number of prize cases and cases involving property taken from "enemy" owners.

Provisional Military Court

Upon the occupation of New Orleans by Federal troops a provost marshal was appointed who set up a provisional court. Its inauguration was indicated upon the minutes of the United States District Court as follows:

"Sunday, May 4, 1862. - New Orleans, on the first day of this month, having been occupied by the troops of the United States, and a Military Court established by the proclamation of Major General Benjamin F. Butler, commanding the Department of the Gulf; Major Joseph M. Bell was appointed Judge thereof and he declares said court now open for the transaction of business."

This Provisional Military Court was primarily one of criminal jurisdiction, the dockets were crowded with criminal cases involving infractions of military orders, drunkenness, reviling Federal soldiers, treason for tearing down the flag of the United States, etc. This court continued until President Abraham Lincoln commissioned Edward H. Durell as judge of a reestablished district court on May 20, 1863.

The minute books of the Confederate court have not been located; they were probably removed from the files and, possibly, sent to Washington, D. C. Many of the old and forgotten case papers were located and unearthed by the Survey of Federal Archives, but a complete record of these papers is not to be secured owing to a number of gaps in the numbered documents.
